

Dialogue with the devil

Trace back in the Garden of Eden to Eve's sin. What could she have done differently that would have been different for all us?

To not have engaged in dialogue with the devil would have meant no disobedience to God. Eve should have commanded the serpent to leave immediately.

It is the same for us today, the moment we begin to listen to the hiss of the serpent we are defeated. He can plant seeds in you, challenge your heart, question your motives, accuse God, all in the space of a few minutes.

Paul said it succinctly, "casting down every thought that exalts itself against the knowledge of God, and making every thought captive". This is the essence of victory.

Why are we so prone to listening to a pathological liar? Because when Eve fell the crack in her soul became the crack in our soul. Like it or not we are all slaves to his lies, we fall helpless underneath his verbal assaults. Only by the blood of Jesus and the transference of the new nature, do we gain the ability to resist him.

Now with the life of God in our souls, our choice is a daily one. Satan will never stop talking but we can rebuke him and cast his voice out and away from our presence.

Don't dialogue with the devil; you will surely fall if you listen!

Pastor Chambers

Last Sunday as we sang, "We're The People Of God", people in our church from different nations came forward on the platform representing Puerto Rico, Mexico, Philippines, Samoa, America, Cuba, Nigeria, Haiti, Brazil, and Italy. Thank God for the unity, through diversity.

The 30 day Challenge:
